Note: As we can see from three popular sites with mature growth rates- Machu Picchu, Petra and Angkor (see Growth of Tourism Arrivals 2000–2009), visitation can double or triple over ten years (8-12 percent growth rate).

Global heritage sites that are just coming onto the international and domestic tourism scene are often growing much faster (20-30 percent a year). For example, Chavin de Huantar in Peru, grew from 12,000 to over 100,000 visitors in the same period.

Potential $100 Billion Opportunity for Global Heritage for Developing and Emerging Countries

DISCUSSION NOTES

Source:

Tourist figure citations noted in the 500 Site database were researched by Ms. Shweta Shankar, an Economics MS Grad from Stanford University.

IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT ESTIMATES of INDIVIDUAL SITE REVENUES MAY BE HIGHER OR LOWER THAN ACTUAL, BUT SPREAD OVER 500 SITES THIS DOES NOT AFFECT THE ECONOMIC ANALYSIS TOO MUCH.

Four points:

1. We are going to continue to collect visitation and revenue data for each site to improve accuracy and for our monitoring on GHN and will revise next year for 2010.
2. With current growth rates, many emerging countries and regions around these sites will no longer be developing countries by 2025, ie. will communities living around the Great Wall in China still be $3-5 per day PCI in 2025?
3. The $100B by 2025 number is a rough 'back of the napkin' analysis based on key assumptions for both domestic and international tourism revenues $$ per visitor per site:
4. Average spend per visitor is $40 per person domestic and $200 per person international assuming an average stay of 1.4 days.

In most sites, local visitation is underestimated as only the paid ticket holders are counted- ie. Guatemalans all go free on Sundays at Tikal and there are no tickets sold or poorer locals will go to a non-monitored part of the Great Wall. So $40 per domestic visitor could be high if really local, or low for Beijing and Shanghai richer visitors. Same for Taj Mahal India and many other sites.

Most cross-checking on revenues show our figures can underestimate or overestimate the revenues. For example, Machu Picchu in Peru had a estimation of $384 million -

Machu Picchu (600,000 x $40 domestic) + (1,800,000 x $200 intl) =
$384,000,000 estimate in 2009

$384,000,000 IS THE AMOUNT PERU SAYS THE COUNTRY LOST IN 2 MONTHS OF CLOSURE DUE TO FLOODS IN 2010. SEE BELOW:

Machu Picchu Reopens

By Meg Weaver, April 1, 2010 NatGeo

An estimated 850,000 tourists visited Machu Picchu in 2008. This year's two-month closing, depending where you get your numbers, likely cost the government between $160 million and $416 million.

Despite the loss in revenue both for the government and the 175,000 local people who make their livings directly from Machu Picchu tourism, the forced closing of the site prompted a reconsideration of how to preserve the site. In fact, in 2008, UNESCO threatened to demote Machu Picchu to being labeled an endangered site due to disagreements over crowd control at the site and UNESCO's management plan for it, which stated that no more than 917 people should visit the site any given day and no more than 385 should be there at any time.

Peru sees tourist revenue of $9.15 billion in past four years

During the last four years, Peru has received some US $9.15 billion in foreign tourists expenditures, says Eduardo Ferreyros, Minister of Trade and Tourism.

The Minister remarked that despite the international financial crisis of 2008 and 2009, Peru received 2.14 million visitors in 2010, which represents a 4% increase compared to 2008. This also means an increase of US $2.47 billion in foreign exchange, 2.2% more than in the previous year.

2 Apr 2010

Peru's most famous archaeological site, Machu Picchu, has formally reopened after it was closed for two months.

Hundreds of tourists, including US actress Susan Sarandon, took the train to the 15th Century Inca ruin - the most-visited site in Latin America.

Heavy rains and landslides at the end of January cut rail access to the site, trapping some 4,000 tourists.

Peru had lost some $200m (£131m) in revenue because of the closure, Peru's tourism minister told the BBC.
